

What would Marx do?

How the greatest political theorists
would solve your everyday problems

Gareth Southwell

 CASSELL
ILLUSTRATED

Contents

Introduction 6

Chapter 1: Freedom 8

My car has just been stolen! But can I hold the thieves responsible? • My friend says that I'm getting too fat. But, surely, it's none of her business? • Should I watch what I say on Twitter? • Is it OK to be addicted to Facebook? • Do I really have to wear a bicycle helmet? • If I believe that eating meat is wrong, shouldn't everyone else? • Is it wrong to want a bigger house? • I've lost my job to a robot! What can I do?

Chapter 2: Equality 44

Is my local golf club a fair society? • Should I bother to vote? • How should we decide what to watch on TV? • Which of us should look after the baby? • I can't see the game as well as I'd like. Should I complain? • Should my children benefit from my success? • Do I earn enough? • Should the state recompense me for my bad luck?

Chapter 3: Power & Authority 80

Do I have a duty to feed Hammy? • Should I leave the kids in charge when I go on holiday? • Can I trust the news? • My teenage son calls me a "fascist" – am I? • My new department miss their old boss. Should I just sack everyone? • Should I go to jail for some trees? • Should I get married?

Chapter 4: Rights 116

My plane has crashed on a desert island. How will I and the other surviving passengers get along until we are rescued? • I've just seen a UFO! Why is the government lying to us? • Should I emigrate to Mars? • Can I sack a robot? • Should my right to vote be based on my IQ? • There is a bomb somewhere. To what lengths should I go to find it? • I am a teacher who's a part-time nude model – is that a problem? • My beliefs are in conflict with my job. What should I do?

Chapter 5: Justice 150

Should I drink fair-trade coffee? • Should I support my country going to war? • It is rumoured that a hostile neighbouring state has developed nuclear weapons. Should I support my government in carrying out a pre-emptive strike? • Should I support my country if it decides to intervene in another country's domestic affairs? • A new political party promises "progressive change". Can I believe that it can offer anything new? • Should I have children? • Should I give to charity? • Why does Hollywood think the future is so grim?

Bibliography 184

Index 188

Acknowledgments 192