Governments at UN Doha Conference Must Recognise the Need For Lasting Systemic Solutions

Brussels, 27 November 2008 (ITUC OnLine): As governments gather in Doha, Qatar, for the biggest UN conference on financing development since the Monterrey Conference six years ago, the International Trade Union Confederation (ITUC) has reminded them that policies to address the financial crisis and mobilise resources for development must be linked to employment creation and decent work in the real economy.

"Jumpstarting the world economy must begin by measures aimed at a fairer distribution of resources, reducing income inequality and increasing the purchasing power of workers," stated ITUC General Secretary Guy Ryder.

Ryder is leading a 30-strong global trade union delegation to the UN talks in Doha at the International Review Conference on Financing for Development (FfD), which is the date that governments agreed to set themselves when they met six years ago to decide on a comprehensive agenda for achieving coherence between economic, financial and trade policies in the interests of development.

"Six years on we see that governments have not honoured their commitments to fair trade, substantial debt relief and effective aid. We witness incoherent policies that have led to a deepening world recession and a looming jobs crisis. Instead of increasing development assistance, the level of aid actually fell last year - and that was before governments became preoccupied overwhelmingly with their countries' own economic recovery and their own political survival," stated Ryder. "Such a short-sighted vision will deliver neither development nor recovery."

"The current financial and economic crisis must not cause governments of industrialised countries to forget their commitments to development assistance and poverty eradication," Ryder concluded.

In a major policy statement entitled "Investing in Decent Work - the Key to a New Global Economy" the ITUC sets out a trade union platform for development, grouped into the six main areas for discussion in Doha:

- * Mobilizing Domestic Resources for Development
- * Mobilizing International Resources for Development
- * Trade as an Engine of Growth and Development
- * Enhancing Development Cooperation
- * Addressing External Debt
- * Addressing Systemic Issues and Policy Coherence

The Decent Work Decent Life Campaign is organizing a Conference in Doha on "Financing Decent Work - An Imperative for Sustainable Development. If you are in Doha, please join the Conference. See the program below:

Multi-stakeholder Forum:
"Financing Decent Work - An Imperative for Sustainable Development"
Follow-up Conference on Financing for Development
December 1, 08.15 - 09.45
Dukhan Meeting Room, Sheraton Hotel, Doha, Qatar

Organised by the Decent Work, Decent Life campaign comprising the International Trade Union Confederation (ITUC), the European Trade Union Confederation (ETUC), the Global Progressive Forum (GPF), SOLIDAR and World Solidarity.

The international Decent Work for Decent Life Campaign believes that Financing for Development is a crucial process if world leaders are serious about the internationally agreed development goals. However, the process should be linked to the ILO's Decent Work Agenda. Decent work is an integrated policy response based on creating jobs, respect for labour rights, social protection and social dialogue.

Providing decent work opportunities to people around the world, especially the working poor, is the very foundation of sustainable development. Decent jobs make people the agents of their development and of their communities. The financial crisis provides an opportunity for a fundamental re-think of how the global economic system can be re-oriented towards the creation of decent work for all.
